Congratulations! You were successful in achieving a passing score on the AOCNP® Examination. The passing score is based on the number of test items that are answered correctly on the examination.

ONCC will mail your certificate in four to six weeks and you will be issued a digital badge within 30 days. Your credential can be verified via the ONCC credential verification system available at www.oncc.org/verify-certification. The chart below summarizes your performance in each subject area of the examination, based on the portion of items you answered correctly.

Performance Summary

Total Points Required for Renewal:			25

Please retain this report. It provides important information for your next certification renewal. This report will be available to you via the candidate portal at <https://www.psiexams.com/ONCC> beginning 24 hours after the time you completed your exam.

The number of points you need for renewal is listed in the chart above. A minimum of 25 points is required for renewal. The maximum number required is 100. You must earn professional development points in each of the subject areas marked as "ILNA Points Required". The number of points that must be earned in a specific area matches the weighting of that subject area in the test content outline. If your total points required in specific subject areas is less than 25, you can earn the additional ILNA points in any of the subject areas listed above to total at least 25 ILNA points.

You can begin earning ILNA points as of the date you passed the examination. Professional development activities completed before this date will not be accepted toward your next certification renewal. For more information about ILNA, visit the ONCC website at <https://www.oncc.org/ILNA>.

ONCC will send you an email in a few weeks with details about how to access LearningBuilder, the online tool where you will record your points for renewal as required by your learning plan. You will submit both your points and a renewal application via the ONCC website to complete the two-step renewal process.
