Please retain this report. It identifies the subject areas that form your learning plan for your next certification renewal.

You must earn professional development points in each of the subject areas marked as ILNA points required in the table above. The number of points that must be earned in a specific area matches the weighting of that subject area in the test outline. A minimum of 25 points is required for renewal. If the total number of points you are required to earn in specific subject areas is less than 25, you may earn the additional ILNA points in any of the subject areas listed above to total at least 25 points.

Additional detail about the subject areas can be found in the test content outline at https://www.oncc.org/resource-center/preparing-certification. Reviewing the content outline will help you find appropriate activities to meet your learning needs.

You may begin earning points as of the date you completed the assessment and received this results report. Points earned prior to completing the assessment will not count toward your certification renewal.

ONCC will send you an email in a few weeks with details about how to access LearningBuilder, the online tool where you will record your points for renewal. Your required ILNA points, as noted in this results report, will appear in your individual learning plan in LearningBuilder. You will submit documentation of your professional development activities through LearningBuilder.
